18:18, Ruins-Rubble - a hypothetical performance

The past lies in ruins, and the future fell into rubble, yet no necessity for the hero arises. The necessity for a heroic sacrifice has not appeared yet; the genius stands solid. There is, of course, the possibility that it is just our hero, who failed to notice the storm carrying the humanity through destruction to totality, the freeing immortality. And it is up to him to direct the flow and absorb the first fatal impact of the force that will be the universal rule of his people. His Gesamtkunstwerk.

A true hero, of course, cannot be hindered by the lack of necessity. He constructs the necessity like he dictates the flow of his people and his own self-fluidization, his own death. By the history of his own people, the hero might be branded as a genius, and by the next hero, a dictator. But if one very much seeks to enter the greatness of totality, yet lacks the talent of orchestration, how can one reach the liberating deadly impact? Is there a shortcut to this revolutionary performance? Can one simply plunge into death and hope that this one gesture will rearrange the fragments? If one is not great enough to be a suicidal dictator, perhaps one can be a dictating suicidal, or to be even more achievable, a self-dictating suicidal.

Perhaps finally, truly in the style of modern freedom, the unrealized hero can straighten the crooked mirror, which till now reflected his own kind but never included himself.

An acted out complaint of 20 minutes in an intense manifestation with my Higher Self. The angel number 1818 prompts a portal to open during my flixbus ride at exactly 18:18, revealing my Higher Self and depositing upon me a higher consciousness.

Scenography

Boxes depicting fragments of the bus assemble into a construction of approximately four meters in length. Inside, two performers sit near the opening as if it were a window. The inside of the bus is obscured from view during the performance.

The construction derives from a previous work - Cheburashka: It is important how you arrive. The fragmentation and assembly will happen similarly.

In my complaint, which is directed at nothing lesser than your average life, I decided to follow in the footsteps of Onyeka Igwe and work with dis - and reorganization, visual and spoken citations, reenactment. Clumsily quoting a somewhere operating flixbus, I am rebuilding it in the exhibition space out of painted and collaged boxes. Constructed in the name of a lament, the functionless quote of a bus is fit to serve as its central piece and a portal opened for bitter manifestation with my only guaranteed listener - myself. The form of the complaint, as well as the writing of the dialogue, are adapted and reenacted from Venedikt Yerofeyev's Moscow — Petushki.

Excerpts of the dialogue

Вот он, вот он — конец света
Завтра встанем в неглиже
Встанем-вскочим — света нету
Правды нету! Денег нету!
Ничего святого нету! — Рейган в Сирии уже.
- Венедикт Васильевич Ерофеев

Here it is, here it is — the end of the world
Tomorrow we'll get up in our underwear
We'll get up — jump up — there's no light
There's no truth! There's no money!
There's nothing sacred left! —
Reagan is already in Syria.
- Venedikt Yerofeyev

Flixbus, route Paris Bercy Seine to Malmö, delayed 70 minutes.

18:18 - somewhere between Antwerp and Eindhoven

Higher Self: Goeieavond, dearest! He had to choose between two industries which, in essence, are not very different, since in both the task is to entertain other people's funding as persuasively as possible. But the cunning god reflected that the profession of beggar does not enjoy as high a regard in public opinion as the profession of artist; that the former is condemned by the police, whereas the latter is even privileged by the laws; that artists now climb to the highest rung on the ladder of honor, while those of the beggar's profession must sometimes ascend a rather less pleasant ladder; that beggars risk both their freedom and their lives, whereas the artist can lose only his cultural capital—or merely that of his friends. And so the most cunning of the gods became an artist; and, to make the matter complete, he even became a Dutchman.

Cheburashka: It is important how you arrive

First lesson to my daughter: it is important how you arrive. Cheburashka arrived in a box of oranges and emerged as an Israeli in the eyes of the Russian budget committee.

New lesson for my daughter on the desire of disappearance: Before you apply for leefloon, try commodifying nothingness. The Austrian empress Sisi would have given her royal self to live as a failed merchant-Jewish poet.

Chicken Rhymes

My life has become too easy, too simple;
I suffer from little things.
And though they are not an addition of any new sort,
maybe not an addition at all,
a sense of endless renewal spirals to the front of annoyance.
An old cycle begins.

The timeline of grounded complexity, which leading to partial forms are never adjacent in any new way.
Are they adjacent at all?
The smell of continuous clocks ticks in the face of boiled soup.
The chicken is cooked.

Staccato forced in a straight facility once,
Jumping from corrupt pies.
Twice.
Fell from the Flemish stairs. Crawl back,
coal black potato,
back into your ratatouille.
Хуй.

Messenger of the Post

Blasphemous cancerous squirrel,
as if in misusing god,
as if in against all odds,
without nuts behind her cheeks,
speaks.

She relays
to wander inside four walls,
following the smell of stamps,
the sound of glands,
instructing to the room two two six.

Blasphemous cancerous squirrel
comes in,
id in hand,
following the songs of glands.
stands.

She opens the door.
Whore.
Blasphemous cancerous squirrel,
as if in dismissing god,
spitting out her nuts,
to deliver the message of the post.
